DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Baldwin Memorial Church is located on the southeast corner of Rt. 178 and Indian Landing Rd., facing west. A low stone wall with a cast iron gate encloses the church yard. The cemetery around the church is planted with many large trees. The church, constructed in 1896 and enlarged in 1963, is the third to stand on this spot. The second church (AA-176) was moved across the street.

Built of native stone to resemble an Early English Gothic Church, the building is one story high on a lighted, partially above ground basement, approximately five bays long (originally three) and one bay wide; it has a steep gable roof and a three-story bell tower on the northwest corner. In addition, there is a enclosed porch with a gable roof near the east end of north elevation, added in 1963. The stone is rock faced random ashlar cut from local (Falls Road) quarries. Most of the stone is brown incolor and appears to be a mixture of iron stone and granite; a close look reveals the enlarge ment ~~ato~~ the east end of the building.

The main entrance is in the west elevation of the bell tower. A pointed arch entry surrounded with stone quoins holds vertical board doors with strap hinges and tracery above them. The enclosed porch on the north elevation also contains double doors; they are paneled and the upper halves display pointed arches filled with stained glass.

A large pointed arch window containing stained glass, tracery, and a quatrefoil in a triple arch is on the the facade. In common with the rest of the fenestration, it has stone sills and quoins surrounding it. The large window on the opposite gable end-over the altar-depicts St John on the island of Patmos. It was designed by Tiffany and originally commissioned for a church in New York. The windows on the north and south elevations are held within recessed rectangular openings. They are double pointed arches with wooden foil tracery, the frames of which are painted green.

The upper part of the bell tower is crenelated like a fortification. The window openings are long rectangles, arranged in pairs on the second story and in threes on the third story, where they are arched at the tops.

The slate gable roof is steeply pitched and the ridge runs east to west. A stone Celtic cross is at the top of the front gable.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Baldwin Memorial Church was built in 1896 of locally quarried stone in a Early English Gothic style. It is the third church to have stood on the same site. The first church c. 1820 was shared with the Episcopalians until they built their own church c. 1840. In 1861 the Methodists built the frame Cross Roads Church (AA-) which was moved across the street sometime before the present church was completed in 1896. The name was changed from Cross Roads to Baldwin Memorial.

When the church was erected, it was 1/3 of its present size. In 1963 the building was lengthened to provide space for a divided chancel in the east end. The church contains a stained glass altar above the altar which was designed by Louis Comfort Tiffany

The Baldwin Memorial Church, distinguished by ashlar stone work, a battlemented tower and a Celtic cross, is set within a church yard, surrounded by a low stone wall, the architectural style and the setting making it a significant landmark at the old Severn Cross Roads.

HISTORICAL FACTS ABOUT BALDWIN MEMORIAL UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

The history of Baldwin Memorial United Methodist Church began back in the late 1700's when followers of John Wesley were worshipping in Methodist Societies in England and America. On December 24, 1784, the "Christmas Conference," as it was called, met at Lovely Lane Chapel in Baltimore, Maryland. There, the Methodist Episcopal Church in America was formed and Francis Asbury and Dr. Coke were elected Superintendents. Previous to this the Methodists of the Colonies were merely united in classes and had organized no church.

The Methodist Societies met in individual members homes. Methodist preachers in America rode circuits periodically visiting the various homes. Among those homes used for Society meetings on the Annapolis circuit was Brooksby's Point, the home of Mr. John Sewell. Bishop Francis Asbury preached in this home several times and refers to the visits at Brooksby's Point in his Journal. It is believed that the Methodist Society at Brooksby's Point was organized around 1777. This home was on an original grant of land from Charles II dating back to 1662.

Asbury occasionally visited the Sewell home during his ministry in America. Toward the end of his career, though crippled with painful rheumatism, he continued to make the rounds on his circuit. At the Sewell home he was lifted on to a chest of drawers to preach because he did not have the strength to stand. This chest of drawers is now on loan to the Lovely Lane Museum in Baltimore.

By 1817, the Society meetings had grown too large for a private home. The Methodists decided to unite with the Protestant Episcopalians in building a frame church at Severn Cross Roads, on the site of the present church. The land was donated by Thomas Turner and deeded to the Trustees John Sewell, Matthias Hammond, and Augustine Gambrill. Each Congregation was to alternate weeks in the use of the building.

In 1840, the Protestant Episcopal members built their own church, St. Stephens; and in 1861 they sold their interest in the church at the Cross Roads to the Methodists for $100.

The Methodists in 1861 replaced the first church with a colonial style frame church. It was called Cross Roads Church, and was part of the Severn Circuit, an 8 point circuit served by one of two travelling preachers every other Sunday afternoon.

In 1881, Christopher Columbus Baldwin, son of William Henry Baldwin (owner of Bunker Hill), proposed that the church be detached from the Circuit. He gave $10,000 to be used for the support of a pastor and in 1882, Rev. Lewis A. Thirlkeld became the first minister under the new plan.

The Baldwin family asked and received permission to replace the 1861 colonial church with a stone church. The colonial church was moved across the road to be used for a church school. In 1896, a lovely stone church, resembling an English chapel, was built. The bell tower was originally in the drafts for the new church but money ran low. It was finally made a reality through a special gift of $1000. from Mrs. William Henry Baldwin, Jr.

On Thanksgiving Day, 1896, the church was dedicated free of debt by Bishop John F. Hurst. The Baltimore Annual Conference voted, over the protest of the donors, to change the name of the church from Cross Roads Church to Baldwin Memorial Church in dedication to the tireless support of William Henry and Jane Maria Baldwin.

The main window over the altar in the Sanctuary was donated by Mrs. William Woodward, Jr. The window, made by Tiffany of New York City, had been made for a church in New York but Mrs. Woodward was able to acquire it for Baldwin Memorial Church. Today the window is irreplaceable.

By 1936, the church school had become crowded and an addition to the church school building was made. The Church School - Community Center was dedicated to Rev. Dr. Charles W. Baldwin because of his service and support, not only to the church at the Cross Roads but also to the Methodist Church as a whole.

In 1936, at the same time the church school was being enlarged, a small building originally used as a Sunday School and a Sons of Temperance Clubhouse was purchased by Dr. Charles Baldwin and reconstructed as a church school library. In the 1850's this building had also been used as a public school house.

In 1963, the church dedicated an initial cost of over $100,000. to enlarge the Sanctuary with a divided chancel.

In 1969, ground breaking took place for a new Educational Building, to cost $300,000, which was needed to meet the needs of the surrounding communities. On September 20, 1970, the building was consecrated as the Summerfield Baldwin, Jr. Educational Building.

In the present year, 1972, Baldwin Memorial Church, once an original Asbury Station, now serves a congregation of 650 and continues to grow in size, activities, and Christian Fellowship.
